

ABSTRACT OF THE DISCLOSURE

A data processing system is provided with a digital signal processor 5 which has an instruction for conditionally branching based on the contents of a specified test register. Each time a branch is taken, the register is decremented as a side effect of executing the branch instruction. In addition, a predicate register is specified by the instruction. A branch occurs only if both registers meet specified conditions.